

Dear Parents,

A primary goal of the Farmington Public Schools' Reading Program is to develop a lifelong desire to read for both pleasure and knowledge acquisition. The Farmington Summer Reading Program is a collaboration between the Farmington Public Schools and the Farmington Libraries. The program is designed to encourage students to continue the reading "habit" throughout the summer months. This extended reading opportunity will sustain reading achievement and expand reading interests.

Parents are children's first teachers and your support is critical in reinforcing our expectation that every student participate in the Farmington Summer Reading Program. Perhaps the best way to show your support is to find some quiet summer reading time yourself and let your youngster see you enjoy the experience of reading. As parents, teachers, school and public librarians offer encouragement through the Summer Reading Program, thousands of Farmington young people can reap the benefits that only time spent reading can provide.

Keeping Farmington's elementary students excited about a variety of books during the summer months is the central goal of the school librarians, and the Farmington Library staff as they select books for the newest edition of the Farmington Elementary Reading Lists (2007). The librarians diligently read, discuss and select books that will encourage children to imagine, wonder, make personal connections, and gain information as they read. We hope you enjoy many of the books on the lists and find other exciting books at the library during the summer.

Dear Parents,

We hope you will find many chances to read and talk with your child about books this summer. This packet is designed to offer suggestions for books we believe children will enjoy and learn from as they develop their language and literacy skills.

Summer is a wonderful time to explore new authors and genre in literature and to keep children motivated to read by choosing books that are easy and fun. The lists here include a range of levels so that every child can find something “just right,” even if that means reading books from another grade level’s list.

The staff at the Farmington public libraries is also eager to help students find these and other books your children will want to read, so we encourage you to take frequent trips to the library to take advantage of all that they can offer. Their theme this year, “Get a Clue!” invites students into the world of mysteries both fiction and nonfiction. Young children can earn prizes and participate in weekly games and activities throughout the course of the summer.

Below are some additional ideas for reading and writing fun this summer:

- Create a photo journal of summer activities with words and pictures
- Send postcards, letters or emails to friends and family
- Read books about upcoming vacation destinations
- Look for websites on favorite topics of interest
- Read recipes and serve the delicious results
- Go to author websites and learn more about what writers do
- Read aloud to a younger cousin or neighbor
- Write some silly poetry and share it at the dinner table

DIRECTIONS TO STUDENTS

1. Read every day! This packet gives you many suggestions for books from a wide range of authors and genres. Some books will be easy while others are more difficult. You should choose to read the books that are just right for you and that you enjoy. It is okay to read the same books again and again. Summer reading should be fun and interesting!

2. Each time you finish a book, write down the title and the author on the book log “Get a Clue!” that your teacher will give you from the public library. You are invited to bring your book log to the library each week over the summer to be stamped and to collect a prize. Bring this log to school on the first day. We are planning to celebrate all the good reading students have done over the summer!

3. In the fall, your new teacher will be anxious to get to know you as a reader. At the end of the summer, answer the questions on the form on the next page. Be sure to bring it to school with your book log and hand it in to your new teacher. Your teacher will want to spend some time talking with you about your book choices and reading interests. This form will help get this important conversation started.

The Public Library will hold a special celebration complete with ice cream and treats for all summer readers at the end of August.
